3. The hospital is for military personnel and their immediate families. Recalled reservists are given physical examinations only if the individual himself states that there is something wrong with his health, in which case, he is examined for that specific complaint. Draftees who stated that something was wrong with them during their preinduction physical were sent to this hospital from the replacement center for further examination of their complaint. [] handled an average of 150-200 of these draftees daily. [] the number of draftees was so large because they did not want to be in the armed services and hoped to avoid service in this manner.

9. When the revolution began, the hospital was used by the Freedom Fighters and all of the employees stayed, including the Communist Party members. The chief surgeon supported the revolutionists. On 4 Nov 56, after the revolution ended, a Soviet officer came to the hospital and made a list of all the wounded Freedom Fighters by name and also took the names of all civilian employees of the hospital. The chief surgeon tried to get all of the wounded Freedom Fighters out of the hospital before the Soviet officer returned.
